

11th Annual University Library

Author's Lecture

in association with the University of Denver's Provost's Office

featuring

TONI TIPTON-MARTIN

Breaking the Jemima Code

A Look Into the Recipe Files of America's Great Cooks

Thursday, April 27th, 2017

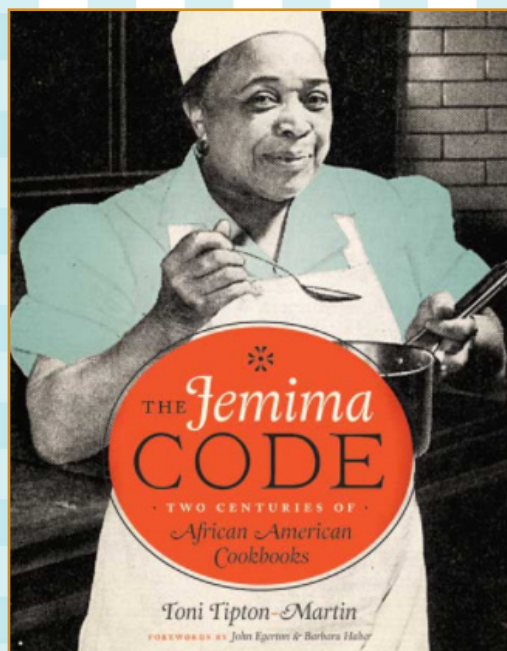

1 PM - 2 PM

Anderson Academic Commons

Special Events Room

(AAC 290)

RSVP with this link
or call (303) 871-3016

Cookbooks are recognized as an important way women assert their individuality, develop their minds and structure their lives. With that in mind, Toni Tipton-Martin, an award-winning food journalist, relied upon a vast network of public and private archives to tell a remarkable history in her acclaimed book, The Jemima Code: Two Centuries of African American Cookbooks. She put on the aprons of great black cooks and peeked into their recipe collections. She shares how her work destroyed a myth and is reconstructing a new role model with a lot more wisdom than just the recipe for great pancakes.